

ABSTRACT

A leather tile having a first face, a second face , side edges and a hole. In particular, hole has a desired shape and extends between first face and second face of tile. Also a 5 plurality of holes, of desired shape, which define scripts, decorations, designs, etc., can be made, as well as no holes at all. The hole is filled with hardened resin in order to show, on first face, a portion of resin matching the hole same. The hardened resin extends from first face to second face up to lining completely the lower surface thereof. The resulting tile comprises a leather layer to which a layer of plastic resin of a certain thickness is integral 10 and allows one to level the lower surface of leather layer and to level the overall thickness.
